THINKING OUT LOUD

By H. M. L., SR.

Spring is here and the Fourth of July is on the way. One would hardly know about Spring, but that the Fourth is approaching, this year to be celebrated in Nevada City, there can be no doubt. For, young men, as usual impatient, are giving their whiskers the air. Their varied forms, that is, the whiskers, are somewhat amusing even when they camouflage well known faces.

Time was, only 75 years ago, when almost all men in California wore whiskers. Of course there were a few dandies that resolutely stropped their razors and sheared them off each morning or night as the case might be, though mostly in the morning. We remember quite well our two grandfathers that grew lordly beards. One had what was called a "sandy red" beard, the other a big brown beard. The beard did not always follow the color of the hair on the head, sometimes it offered a contrast.

In that time, along about Civil War days the majority (a considerable majority) of human males, wore beards. A bare faced man, until he proved himself otherwise, was considered effeminate or suffering from some inherent weakness which prevented his whiskers from growing.

We suspect that nature intended man to wear a beard. Males of other species often do have beards, sometimes both horns and beards. The turkey tom has a goatee of coarse hair that sprouts from where his Adam's apple should be. The gorilla and the orangoutang males sport beards that become more abundant with age. The male lion not only has a beard but a mane, and of course there is the common goat.

Now when men began to discard the beard, was this a step toward enlightenment, the higher civilization? Probably. Because when a man is engaged in shaving, he thinks. The old days of rolling out of bed, running a comb through the flowing whiskers, are gone. The man is engaged in improving his appearance. He does not wish to be mistaken for what he isn't. The beard concealed his features, which most men individually consider handsome. In cases where the features were weak, of course, the beards were a longer time coming off. Even now a weak chin covered with whiskers does not prove so much a bait to "confidence" men as does a weak chin unveiled.

But in the days of '49, we have reason to believe that razors were comparatively scarce. All the old daguerreotypes and painted portraits tell the story. The gold seekers were generally busy men. Even when it occured to them to shave, which it might have done when their wives and families arrived by ship in San Francisco, the thought of the time wasted probably deterred them. By digging during the fifteen minutes the shave would occupy, the Argonauts would figure they could buy the lumber for a porch on the waiting home. Besides the razor, if any, was probably packed away somewhere, and the thought of finding it and tackling that flowing mass of chaparal, made him guess his family would have to recognize him by his voice rather than his face.

But when we think a little further back in history, we notice that Washington, Jefferson, the Adams, Hamilton, and all America's great men were smoothly shaven. What must we conclude from this? Well, in the first place, they belonged, as we now say, to the "upper crust". They were the leaders, and as politicians must not conceal their physiogomy from their followers. They were in the main, descendants of English gentry. They followed the convention of the shaven face.

But as time went on, fewer and fewer of the American men felt the urge to be in fashion. The razor was neglected, became dull, and on rare occasions, when it was brought into use, proved such an instrument of torture, that a comb replaced it. When whiskers came in again men who played poker, had no need of the "poker face." The whiskers did the trick. The beard was a boon to all gamblers.

In this modern day shaving has been made easy. The safety razor, insuring no cuts and slashes, the various ungents and ointments, have made dewhiskering a morning pleasure. Shaving is no longer a battle leaving a blood stained field. And, perhaps after men religiously shaved their faces every morning for a thousand years, it may become unnecessary. Nature, outraged by man's persistent rebuffs of her creative and decorative effort, will at length withdraw the means of growing beards. In other words beards will cease to sprout. When that day comes the men will all be as smooth faced as their wives, or their sisters, or their cousins, or their aunts.

BATTERY CHARGES

NEVADA CITY: Robert Patterson, 30, a sawmill worker, pleaded guilty Friday to battery charges before Justice of the Peace George Gildersleeve. He was fined $25. The complaining witness was Ralph Busby, owner of the Yuba Inn, in Washington on the South Yuba River, 17 miles east of Nevada City.

NORTH SAN JUAN SHOOTING CASE PROCEEDS

NEVADA CITY: Robert Bridges, accused of disturbing the peace in North San Juan last week, appeared Saturday before Justice of the Peace George Gildersleeve and pleaded not guilty. His trial was set for April 27th along with that for Stephen Fairchild, accused of the same offense. The two men will be tried by the same jury.

The arrest of Bridges and Fairchild followed a shooting affray in which Bridges shot twice at a car behind which Fairchild stood. Bridges states he received a terrific beating at the hands of Fairchild, after his gun had been wrested from him by Ralph Wilson, brother-in-law of Fairchild. Following his arrest, Bridges spent two days in the Nevada County Hospital recovering.

Man Cited For Lack Of Caution In Bus Collision

GRASS VALLEY: Robert H. Potts of Grass Valley was cited by the California Highawy Patrol Thursday for lack of caution in driving into a car which, under the impetus of his car, pushed into a school bus, discharging children Wednesday at the intersction of the Lake Olympia Road and the Nevada City-Grass Valley Highway. The impact resulted in a back injury for Elsie Arbaugh, 13, who was leaving the bus.

Elviede E. Higer, driving the car which had halted behind the bus, and Luther Ring, a passenger with her were treated at the Miners Hospital in Nevada City for minor injuries.

Placer gold is often associated with other heavy minerals.

NO AGREEMENT NOW BETWEEN N.I.D., G.V., N.C.

GRASS VALLEY: The board of directors of the Nevada Irrigation District have withdrawn from tentative agreement with municipalities of Grass Valley and Nevada City, regardng a 10-year contract.

This action was taken following a resolution adopted by the Nevada County Farm Bureau, representing the land owners.

The municipalities had tentatively agreed to substitute a 10-year contract for the present contract under which the cities buy their water at 16 cents a miners inch. This contract has three years to run. Under the proposed new contract the municipalities would buy water at 25 cents a miners inch.

But the two cities objected to the retroactive clause which would make the new rates operative from January 1st, 1948. Nevada City, which owns part of its own supply also objected to a standby charge of $200.

The Farm Bureau resolution asked that all offers be withdrawn until the domestic water situation could be studied and the landowners could then advise the board of their conclusions.

his mind that they were the highwaymen. He jumped back and grabbed his rifle and I followed suit with the shotgun and pistol. We both stood in the door and when they rode up they saw we were heeled and had the advantage of being inside. They halted, hesitated a minute, the leader fell back and said something to one of the men, and then asked if they were on the Blue Tent trail. Pard answered, "Yes, keep right along and you will get there." The spokesman, a good-looking fellow with long, light hair and mustache, wanted o know if we took them for a lot of d——n robbers, and Pard replied: "Never mind what we take you for, move along"; and they went. After they were out of (NOTE.—Reelfoot Williams, who is credited with being the leader of the gang of highwaymen mentioned in the diary, was a notorious desperado of the early days, and, so far as known, the first to organize a gang of murderers and thieves for systematic predatory work on the roads and trails. He first became locally known at Downieville, Sierra County, as a gambler and suspected robber, his chief source of income being derived from holding up miners on the trails and relieving them of their coin and gold dust. He was arrested in 1851 for highway robbery, and escaped conviction after a hard-fought legal battle. In this connection, a story is told of his encounter, shortly after his trial, with the judge before whose court he had been arraigned. When Sierra County was organized in 1850, one Chap Schaffer secured the appointment, an all-round good fellow, as good fellows were estimated in those days. He had a smattering of law, and occupied the bench to the satisfaction of the people, who did not demand too much learning or profundity. It was not held against him that he would at any time adjourn court to participate in a lively poker game, or that his salary and fees were dissipated at the faro banks. The day after the acquittal in Schaffer's court of Reelfoot Williams, the judge had business in one of the adjacent mining camps and, mounting his mule, started on his journey. When halfway up the Slug Canon trail a man stepped out of the chaparral and ordered him to throw up his hands and deliver his valuables.

The judge obeyed without hesitation, so far as elevating his hands, but, recognizing the highwayman, exclaimed in perturbed tones: "Good Lord, Williams! I havent got a cent, the boys cleaned me out in a little game last night."

Williams lowered his pistol with a "Hello, judge, is that you? I didn't know you or I wouldn't have held you up. I knew I had no chance against those Downieville sports. But say, judge, do me a favor, will you? Hurry on, there's another fellow coming up the trail and I've got to get out of this d—— country somehow."

The judge, much relieved in mind if not in pocket, stood not on the order of his going and digging his spurs into the mule, started off at a lively gait. The other fellow was duly halted and Williams secured seven hundred dollars. It was after this exploit that he associated himself with Rattlesnake Dick and three others and started

HISTORIANS HEAR H. P. DAVIS

NEVADA CITY: Hal P. Davis, the celebrated historian, addressed the Historical Society last night at the National Hotel on "Famous Firsts in Nevada City".

Using a brief sketch of the ancient river channels as a springboard, the noted lecturer launched into a fascinating discussion of early mining methods.

His talk divulged many bits of memorabilia of the early days. One anectdote told how a case regarding a mechanic's lien on the Jenny Lind Theater was being heard in court as the swollen waters of Deer Creek threatened the flimsy auditorium. A lawyer in court leaned out the window as the disputed structure was about to topple into the creek.

"There goes the 'lien' with the prior claim," he shouted as the structure tipped, leaned and was carried away in the flood.

Election to the board of directors was held, with President Doris Foley presiding. Those running were unopposed. They are: Gene Ingalls, Genevieve Kent, George Hallock, Donald Paine, William Durbrow, W. M. Kellenberger, Amelia A. Cunningham, H. P. Davis, and Mrs. Isabel Hefelfinger.

Mexican hotel-keepers are said to keep tame boa constrictors as rat-catchers. This is also common practice in the Philippines. Bull snakes are similiarly employed by many farmers in the U. S. A.

out as a full-fledged "road agent". The band held together until 1853, when three of its members were killed in an encounter with a sheriff's posse near Forbestown, Yuba County. Williams and Rattlesnake Dick escaped and fled to the southern country. Dick was stabbed and killed by a rival desperado at Spanish Dry Diggings in '54. Williams disappeared from view for several years, but turned up in the "sixties" in that paradise of roughs and bad men, Virginia City, Nev., where he flourished as "chief," to the annoyance of other aspirants to that coveted title, one of whom poked a shotgun through a saloon window and emptied a charge of buckshot into his carcass, bringing his career to an abrupt termination.)

sight Pard said I had better take Marie back to Nevada and he would go along and raise a posse. Marie was as courageous as either one of us and kept as quiet as a mouse while they were at the cabin, but on the way to town tried to coax me not to go with the party, said that thief catching was not my business, and so did Pard, but I was not going to let him take any chances that I was not willing to share, even if he was a deputy sheriff. So I went. We might as well have stayed at home for all the good it did, although we found out we were right in thinking them highwaymen. An hour after they had left us they robbed the Blue Tent store of a lot of provisions and eight hundred dollars in dust. It was five o'clock before we started and dark by the time we reached Blue Tent We pushed on to Humbug (now North Bloomfield) but they had not been seen there and we figured out that they had gone down the ridge toward Cherokee. We went there the next day, but they had kept out of view and we heard no more of them. I got a good sight of the party at the cabin.

Just Wonderin'

I Wonder as the seeds we sow,
How will our springtime gardens grow?
Will hateful snails and insect pest
The fragrant buds and flowers infest?
Will bugs consume and droughts destroy
That which might be our season's joy?
Or will our garden plots be bright
And fill our hearts with rare delight?

Come boys and girls of all ages from nine to ninety, let's make a garden. Spring is here, Jupiter Pluvius is rearranging his dripping clouds, the sun shines forth in all his glory, all the world is blue and green and golden. This is the season of which Joaquin Miller thought when he wrote;

"Above, above a blue, blue sky,
Below the green, green sod,
And ever and ever between the two
Go the wonderful winds of God."

Can't you hear the rustle of spring? Wind in the tree tops, little streams running through the land and making merry music as they flow, the murmur of life in growing grass and budding tree—the ecstacy of birds songs and of course the turning of many leaves as we scan our seed catalogues and decide upon the plants and flowers which we wish to see growing in our gardens.

Oh, it is fun to make a garden! There is excitement and delight to be found in preparing the ground for the precious seeds and in watching for the first tender shoots to come up hopefully and flaunt their green banners in the face of spring. The delight grows from

Veterans' News

Although farm management training under the GI Bill ordinarily is limited to one veteran on a single farm, Veterans Administration has announced three conditions under which two veterans may take this training on the same farm.

This program is part of the institutional on-farm training program which combines classroom instruction with practical farming. To qualify for the farm management instruction, a veteran must own his own farm or have economic control of a farm.

Those veterans who do not own their own farm may take institutional on-farm training as employee-trainees of a successful farmer approved by the farm training institution.

The conditions which will qualify two veterans for farm management training on the same farm are:

(1) The approved training institution and VA must find that conditions on the farm will assure successful training and subsequent self-employment on the same farm for both veterans.

(2) The training of both veterans must meet all requirements specified in Public Law 377 which established the institutional on-farm training programs.

(3) The two veterans must furnish documentary evidence that they have formed a bona fide partnership, with equal authority in the management and operation of the farm.

Under no circumstances will VA permit a veteran to enter training as an employee-trainee on the farm of another veteran enrolled for farm management training.

The new ruling also cautions farm training institutions to exercise extreme care to determine that a bona fide training situation exists for each veteran when more than one veteran is enrolled as an employee-trainee on the same farm.

Almost 87 percent of the 203,000 World War II veterans enrolled for institutional on-farm training under the GI Bill are training on farms under their control. The remainder are training as employee-trainee on farms approved by the training institution.

QUESTION: Will Veterans Administration pay for tools and equipment while I am taking on-the-job training?

ANSWER: VA will pay for those tools and equipment that are needed by all trainees for the satisfactory pursuit of the same training course.

QUESTION: Will VA pay tuition for a veteran to attend school while he is taking on-the-job training under the GI Bill?

ANSWER: Yes, Veterans Administration will pay for such schooling if his course of study is related to the vocation for which he is in training, or if the school course is prescribed and recommended as a part of his job-training.

An aroused citizenry can beat the rats. Pass a rat-control ordinance and enforce it! Establish a city rat-control unit to inspect, advise, and enforce permanently! Join in your government's anti-rat campaign now.

WASHINGTON NOTES

CAMP BEALE GRAB

The newest development in the Air Corps' effort to hold onto 85,000 acres at Camp Beale is a letter from Eugene M. Zuckert, Assistant Secretary for Air, to me in which he says that they only need 400 acres for the actual bomb target and about 3,600 for a security area around the bomb target. He says they are willing to lease the rest to livestock operators, but fails to explain why they should under the circumstances continue to hold title to any part of the remaining 81,000 acres. In other words, in order to have 400 acres of bombing target plus approximately 3,000 of security area they are trying to hang onto 85,000 acres. In the meantime, the House subcommittee dealing with surplus property has gotten into the matter and will undoubtedly ask the Air Corps some very pertinent questions along that line.

MINERS WIN FIRST ROUND

Under a bill which I recently introduced, thousands of acres would be opened to mining which are now bottled up in powersite withdrawals. I expected a deluge of protests from the federal agencies. The first report came in the other day from the Federal Power Commission and to my surprise is favorable—except that an amendment which I regard of minor importance is requested. The Forest Service and Interior Department are yet to be heard from. But, it may be that we have found the formula to get these vast areas, so potentially valuable to mining, reopened. Much credit is due to Mr. Wendell Robie of Auburn and his mining committee, which has worked on the subject and which helped to formulate the bill.

ERP AIDS FRUIT MEN

The fruit producers of California should be happy. The Marshall Plan as enacted by both houses contains language which requires the use of agricultural surplusses in feeding Europe. This is going to be a life saver to many California specialty crops which, prior to the war, depended as much as 50 per cent on export markets no longer existent. During the war of course they got by all right—the Government took all they could produce. But, now it is different and with their orchards and vineyards built up for a peacetime trade based on export markets they are facing serious surplusses. The amendment which we secured to the bill provides that where practical our surplusses be used first in providing food for starving Europeans. That not only makes good sense, but shows a proper regard for keeping our own economy in balance. People might wonder why such a logical provision should have to be written in the law, but we had a terrific time convincing the State and War Departments. They wanted to use the dollars to buy wheat, which they contended buys the highest number of calories per dollar.

THE STORY OF SWEETLAND
By Ada Perry Landsburg

Editor's Note: Ada Perry Landsburg was born in the little town of Sweetland, January 30, 1859. She was the daughter of John and Lydia Perry, and spent many years there as well as in Relief Hill, North Bloomfield and Nevada City. She and her husband moved to Kuna, Idaho, to be near her daughter, Linda. Some years after her husband passed away, she had the misfortune to fall, and has been bedridden for more than ten years.

Miss Culbertson was a wonderful woman, but we did not know how wonderful, until after she left us. Then we learned she was a home missionary, that she had gone into dangerous places, rescuing girls from dives and brothels sometimes at the risk of losing her life.

Our next teacher, Neil McNeil Kennedy, a Canadian by birth. He was also well educated in English, but also a French, Latin and Greek scholar, and an indefatigable worker and a wonderful help to us older scholars. As he gave lessons in the three languages gratis. After school each night, he taught a large class in French, a smaller class in Latin, and a class of two young ladies in Greek. The writer studied French and Latin, but did not attempt the study of the Greek Language.

The curriculum of the early school was very different from that of later times. School was then opened in the morning with the teacher reading a few verses from the Bible, and the recitation of the Lord's Prayer, by the teacher and scholars, a song to open the school in the afternoon. This was continued for the first few years, at least for the first five or six, while we had the lady teachers.

All classes were required to stand with hands clasped behind our backs with the exception of the reading classes of course, and the higher arithmetic classes. All our lessons were oral, no written work except at examinations. Rules were very strict. No sitting stooped over book when studying, lest we get a slap on the back with the teacher's ruler. Gymnasium exercises, (calisthenics) once a day. As the rules were strict, good order was maintained, as the rod and ruler was ever handy. Punishment was not forbidden, and usually the teacher was upheld by the parents and school board. For poor recitations often, the punishment was standing on the floor for a given length of time, with book in hand to study the unlearned lesson. Sometimes made to stay after school to study. No eating in school of fruit and candy, neithter chewing of gum. These rules were well maintained, few daring to break the rules.

BOOKS USED IN EARLY DAYS

Wilson's Readers, a series of books beginning with primer, first reader, on through the fifth reader, six books. These were in the writer's estimation, a wonderful set of books. The first lesson in the second reader pictured Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, below it the following lines.

"Adam and Eve in Eden lived, a garden sweet and fair.
Their Maker's presence they enjoyed, and every good was there.
One tree that in the garden stood,
God bade them not to take,
But yet they dared to eat the fruit,
and God's commandment break.
Then did the Lord His angel send,
to drive them from the place.
A sinful man in grief did spend,
all his remaining days.
Then let us never, never dare,
to disobey the Lord,
But even now our hearts prepare to learn His Holy Word."

Then interspersed with other lessons, followed the Story of Cain and Abel, told to suit the child mind, the story of the flood, Joseph, sold by his brother and taken into Egypt, Moses saved by the King's daughter and a number of other Bible stories which would interest children and direct their minds to better things.

In the readers following the second, the stories were also instructive showing very plainly the good, and denouncing the evil. The 5th reader, and we believe also the Fourth, helped considerably to teach us, lessons in Botany and Zoology, (now called Biology).

In the Third Reader, we read this for a lesson:

"Thou shalt have no other gods but me.
Before no idol bend the knee.
Take not the name of God in vain,
Dare not the Sabbath Day profane.
Give to thy parents honor due,
Take heed that thou, no murder do,
Abstain from words and deeds unclean,
Steal not though thou art poor and mean.
Tell not a wilful lie, nor love it,
What is thy neighbor's do not covet."

(To be continued)

ELENOR DUMONT (Madame Moustache) A Sacramento paper, September 29, 1871 printed an item dated, Bodie, September 8, 1871. "A woman named Elenor Dumont was found dead today about a mile out of town, having committed suicide. She was known throughout the mining camps."

day to day; buds appear, flowers unfold, we invite friends and neighbors to come in and behold the new and exotic blossoms which we selected days ago from our new spring catalogues. If we have planted vegetables, the delight is still the same. All the family watches with intent interest the development of a golden squash, red tomatoes and all other luscious edibles which will soon decorate the dining table and demonstrate to all the efficiency of our gardening.

Of course there is work attached to this problem of gardening; cut worms will devour and snails consume, if they are not halted in their tracks, weeds will spring up overnight and there is much cultivating and watering to be done; but if we make our gardening successful and we shall if we are diligent, our labors will be well rewarded and we shall find that we have gained health and serenity of mind in its accomplishment.

I wish there could be an international garden and that our leaders and diplomats could be forced to work in it for a few hours of each day. Perhaps the lessons they might learn from growing things would cause them to realize the results which could be obtained by proper methods of proceedure in the garden of human relationships.

Come, boys and girls, let's rearrange and cultivate the garden of our hearts; let's wage incessant war upon the noisome insects of greed, envy, spite and hate which may, if allowed to grow, destroy the fruits of the spirit and blast the buds of faith and hope and courage so greatly needed for the world at this time; let's eradicate the tenacious weeds of intolerance and bigotry which choke the flowers of inspiration and leave the garden of the heart desolate, sere and bare.

Come on boys and girls, let's make gardens.

NUGGET RECIPES

Meaty Dishes Save, Share Popular Food

This is the day of the leftover. It is important from the standpoint of both sharing and saving to use every bit of food available, and to serve it attractively.

The average homemaker needs constant additions to her file of recipes for serving left-overs, says Reba Staggs, home economist. Miss Staggs suggests clipping recipes and serving suggestions from newspapers and magazines, then mounting on recipe cards for easy reference.

A good idea which will win favor with the family is to serve golden brown meat fritters made from cubed left-over meat. Here is a recipe suggested by Miss Staggs:

Meat Fritters

1 pound left-over beef, lamb, pork or veal roast, cut in pieces about 1x1x3 inches
1½ cups sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 egg, well beaten
½ cup milk
Lard for deep-fat frying

Sift dry ingredients and add eggs and milk. The batter will be thick enough to completely coat the meat. Dip the meat in batter and fry in enough lard at 360° F. to cover until golden brown. Serves 6.

In three years' time, given favorable conditions and ignoring the death rate, the progeny from one pair of rats could exceed 350,000,000.

Fine Herbs Enhance Good Meat Flavor

A renewed interest in the finer points of cooking has come about with the return of more and more foods to the market since war days. One of the most important of these trends, according to Reba Staggs, home economist, has been the attention given to seasoning meats witht herbs.

The use of herbs gives the imaginative homemaker a chance to make each dish a new and delectable combination. A single herb, or a group of herbs with the accent on one, can be used. Perhaps the wisest way to learn how to season correctly is to start with half a dozen of the most familiar herbs, and use one at a time until the flavor qualities are known.

Miss Staggs suggests making a list of the various herbs appropriate for different meats, which may be tacked on the kitchen bulletin board or inside cupboard door for handy future reference. Here is a basic list to guide the beginner:

Beef: Basil, sweet marjoram, summer savory, thyme, rosemary.

Veal: rosemary, summer savory, thyme, sage

Lamb: Sweet marjoram, sumsavory, rosemary, mint, dill.

Pork: Sage, basil, rosemary, sweet marjoram, chives.

The Diary of a 49'er

There were five of them, three white men and two greasers. The fellow who did the talking was without doubt the leader, Williams, the other two were Rattlesnake Dick and Jim Mosely, and the two Mexicans, Alvarez and Garcia. We have not the least doubt that they had intended to rob us, and would have done so if Jack had not given us warning. Good old Jack, he showed right there that he is worth all the trouble he ever gave us.

APRIL 25, 1852.—It has not rained for ten days and we will be able to get back into the creek again if we do not have any more showers.. Neither Pard nor I are very anxious to continue mining and we have an offer from some of the Brush Creek boys which we may take up. We told them the result of our first week's washing and they proposed to come over and work with us a week, and if it yielded as well in the beginning they would form a company to run it on shares and give us twenty per cent of what they took out. We have agreed to their proposal and will begin putting in the boxes as soon as the water runs down a little more. I am anxious to get away, but Pard says he will not leave until the time comes to meet his wife. She will start from New York on the 21st of May. I asked Marie what we should do and she says that while thre is nothing to keep her here except my convenience, still, after all Pard had done for me, and considering what our relations may be in the future, we had better postpone our complete happiness for a little while. Pard is much pleased over our decision.

We have bargained to sell our interests in the river claim to the other members of the company for six thousand dollars. If the creek turns out well, I will have pretty close to twenty-five thousand dollars, so I am a comparatively rich man. Marie tells me that she has twenty thousand dollars in Fench Rentes, which, as I understand it, are government bonds; the five thousand dollars invested in San Francisco lots, and a country place near Paris, for which she paid fourteen thousand dollars. This place she wants her mother and sisters to live in, rent free, if I am willing, and they have enough income of their own to get along on nicely. As if I were going to have anything to say about what she does with her money! I will never touch a cent of it, although she insists that when we are married it is mine. Pard says she has it well invested and not to disturb it, as I have enough of my own to go into business or speculate with.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Now It's Neckties Made of Milk!

Fellow in Andy Botkin's Tavern was boasting about a trick necktie he was wearing made out of a by-product of milk. "Took 33 pounds of milk to make this tie," he says.

Bill Webster was unimpressed. "Personally," he says, "I'd rather have the milk to drink. Just as I wouldn't change one glass of good American beer for a necktie made from thirty barrels of it!"

Yes, modern science being what it is—seems like you can make "anything out of anything" these days. But in the case of milk, well I guess drinking it is still a whole lot better than just wearing it.

Of course there are lots of other ways of abusing goods and beverages—like a fellow who doesn't appreciate good beer enough to drink it slowly and in moderation.

But from where I sit, most people who enjoy a wholesome beverage like beer or ale are moderate—because beer itself is a beverage of moderation.
